

How do I find the Good?

Have you got an interest in the sphere of healing? Would you like to learn more about Anthroposophic Medicine? Then come to our conference, titled 'How do I find the Good?', either in person or online between the 3rd – 7th of January 2024!

Exactly 100 years ago, Rudolf Steiner gave a lecture cycle on the esoteric path of development for those wishing to become true healers. The five mediations given in this course work to enliven medical thinking, help one in finding the appropriate remedy, provide knowledge of the true nature of the human being, give insight into the patient's karma, and sharpens one's consciousness through imagination and inspiration.

Over the last three years, YIAM (Young Impulses in Anthroposophic Medicine), a world-wide group of young people have formed and prepared a conference to honour 100 years of this revolutionary lecture series, namely the 'Course for Young Doctors'. We welcome people of all ages, all professions, and all walks of life, to join us during the Holy Nights, in our attempt to awaken to the spiritual world's intentions for the healing and medical work upon earth. In this course, Steiner also emphasizes the importance of the medical youth and the youth movement working together, and we are therefore looking for ways to collaborate going forward into the next 100 years!

The in-person conference will take place at the Goetheanum in Switzerland and the online conference will take place during the European nighttime, for those living in other continents. More information can be found on our website www.yiam.world.

Warmest greetings,

Tania Prince (Oceanic Youth Section and YIAM)
